

Jack Lifton on who drives the Critical Materials Policy in the US

written by InvestorIntel | April 15, 2021

In this episode of InvestorIntel's Critical Minerals Corner with Jack Lifton, Jack talks about how the Department of Defense drives American critical materials policy and how this process does not factor in consumer demand.

In this InvestorIntel video, which may also be viewed on YouTube (click here to subscribe to the InvestorIntel Channel), Jack discusses the annual demand for rare earth permanent magnets from the Defense Department. Describing how "...the policy of the US government is to prioritize the production of critical materials either in the United States or in friendly countries that are allied with the US...", he identifies the challenges inherent in this present formula for sustainability.

To watch the full video, click here

Disclaimer: This interview, which was produced by InvestorIntel Corp. (IIC) does not contain, nor does it purport to contain, a summary of all the material information concerning the "Company" being interviewed. IIC offers no representations or warranties that any of the information contained in this interview is accurate or complete.

This presentation may contain "forward-looking statements" within the meaning of applicable Canadian securities legislation. Forward-looking statements are based on the opinions and assumptions of management of the Company as of the date made. They are inherently susceptible to uncertainty and other factors that could cause actual events/results to differ materially from these forward-looking statements. Additional risks and uncertainties, including those that the Company does not know about now or that it currently deems immaterial, may also adversely affect the Company's business or any investment therein.

Any projections given are principally intended for use as objectives and are not intended, and should not be taken, as assurances that the projected results will be obtained by the Company. The assumptions used may not prove to be accurate and a potential decline in the Company's financial condition or results of operations may negatively impact the value of its securities. Prospective investors are urged to review the Company's profile on www.sedar.com and to carry out independent investigations in order to determine their interest in investing in the Company.

If you have any questions surrounding the content of this interview, please email info@investorintel.com.