Alex Klenman on the Uranium Market and Azincourt's East Preston Project in the Athabasca Basin

written by InvestorNews | December 21, 2021

In a recent InvestorIntel interview, Tracy Weslosky spoke with Alex Klenman, President, CEO and Director of Azincourt Energy Corp. (TSXV: AAZ | OTCQB: AZURF) about the current uranium market and about commencement of road preparation at Azincourt's East Preston Uranium Project in the Athabasca Basin as they prepare for their largest drill program to date.

In this InvestorIntel interview, which may also be viewed on YouTube (click here to subscribe to the InvestorIntel Channel), Alex Klenman said that Azincourt holds a large land position in the Athabasca Basin in Saskatchewan strategically located in the vicinity of many large uranium projects. With significant institutional ownership, Alex said that Azincourt is well funded and is getting closer to making an 'impactful discovery'. He also provided an update on how Azincourt has started to utilize artificial intelligence in its exploration modeling to reduce both cost and environmental impact.
