In the interview, which can also be viewed in full on the InvestorIntel YouTube channel (click here), Kerem Usenmez says that Metallum's Superior Lake Zinc Project is "an old mine with exceptional numbers" and large-scale potential for expansion. Kerem describes Metallum's new zinc target as a "sitting duck – we just don't know how big this duck is." He also discusses the low initial capital costs due to the extensive existing infrastructure, including roads and power at site and 16 kilometers of underground development right to the ore body. With the "zinc market at all-time highs" and all indicators pointing to sustained high prices, Kerem talks about looking forward to a production start as early as Q1 2024.
