Marc Seelenfreund, CEO and Chairman of Siyata Mobile stated, “It was another great year for the Company, and we are now seeing the demand roll into our next generation 4G products which have significantly higher selling prices and profit margins than our legacy portfolio. There are substantial upfront costs associated in launching these devices with various carriers, which include research, development, marketing and government approvals in which the majority was completed in 2017. We anticipate 2018 to be another excellent year for growth, as the world moves away from two-way radio into cellular based solutions in numerous verticals.”
