“Fan Freak leverages our deep sports and esports background,” says Trevor Doerksen, CEO of ePlay Digital. “This zero-cost-to-play sports gaming solution is popular with all types of sports fans. In addition, COVID-19 taught us that sports are not forever and evergreen, schedule disruptions, live audience bans, and player infections are terribly disruptive. So, Fan Freak will add something that no other sports app includes – live matches, broadcasts, stats, and betting from sporting events happening around the metaverse.”

Fan Freak is also interoperable with ePlay’s sports metaverse. At the same time as sports and eSports gaming is being launched in Fan Freak, ePlay has been testing gaming in the metaverse. Picking the winner in the metaverse will take the same skills as picking an NFL fantasy sports team or predicting the results of a race or event. Games and races are played every day in the metaverse, there is no need to wait for Sunday’s kick-off. Recently theScore, a sports news and entertainment app repositioning itself in the mobile sports betting market, announced it was to be acquired by Penn National for \$2 billion. Sports gaming will likely continue to see significant traction and expansion.
