“Victor Oladipo is not only an all-star athlete in the NBA, he is also a highly-engaged investor who brings passion and positivity to everything he does,” said Stephen Ehrlich, Co-founder and CEO of Voyager. “It’s a privilege to launch our Voyager for Good referral program with such an outstanding athlete and to have Victor Oladipo in Voyager’s court.”

“Voyager is bringing the future of finance to everyone,” said Victor Oladipo. “Voyager’s unbeatable combination of over fifty-five crypto assets, outstanding earnings potential with competitive interest rates and an app that is easy and fun to use, make it the perfect platform for anyone getting into the crypto market.”

Oladipo, who has been an early adopter of cryptocurrency, recently made a large real estate acquisition using cryptocurrency for a portion of the purchase.

About Voyager for Good: At Voyager, you can build your stack and give back. When Victor Oladipo’s followers open a new Voyager account using his unique referral code, deposit at least $100, and make their first trade, they will receive $25 in Bitcoin for themselves, and Voyager will also donate $25 in Bitcoin to the Oladipo Foundation to empower the next generation of youth, especially young women, to thrive without limits through confidence, creativity, capacity and community. This expands on Voyager’s already popular Refer-a-Friend referral program.

Additional Voyager partners who plan to be part of the Voyager for Good program include Stephen Piscotty, an outfielder with the Oakland Athletics, who created the ALS Cure Project, a 100% volunteer organization that hosts an annual golf tournament and supports a supercomputing research project to help find a cure for ALS.
