“We experienced an increase in our SIAscopy™ product sales in Q3, a positive sign, with our Brazilian distribution partners participating in industry conferences and building the awareness level and interest in our DermSecure™ telemedicine platform by local dermatologists, as we get closer to regulatory approval in that country,” noted Scott Spearn, CEO of MedX. “We expect to see further interest and increased revenue from the platform as we move into 2020, as the market realizes the benefits of our technology and how we can be a leader in shortening wait times, saving lives and lowering costs to the health care system. In addition, sales from our therapeutic laser products were solid again this quarter, up 41% over last year in Q3, and now 13% higher on a year-to-date basis.”
