Appia's Frederick Kozak on the role of rare earths and uranium in achieving a global NetZero emissions target

written by InvestorNews | November 10, 2021

In a recent InvestorIntel interview, Tracy Weslosky spoke with Frederick Kozak, President of Appia Rare Earths & Uranium Corp. (CSE: API | OTCQB: APAAF) about Appia's recent change of name and about the critical importance of rare earths and uranium in the clean energy space as the world commits to a NetZero greenhouse gas emission goal.

In this InvestorIntel interview, which may also be viewed on YouTube (click here to subscribe to the InvestorIntel Channel), Frederick Kozak provided an update on Appia's recent news release about the discovery of new, massive and semi-massive, monazite zones at the Wilson North area of their Alces Lake, Saskatchewan, project. He went on to say that Appia's Alces Lake project has the potential to be one of the best monazite-hosted rare earths deposits in the world. Frederick also provided an update on Appia's recent private placement which had to be upsized due to significant demand.
